Y'ATE YET?

Life is about experiences, and at The House at Gatewood, we put our heart and soul into restoring this beautiful historic space so great people can experience delectable fare under the warmth of Southern hospitality.

The House at Gatewood is a culinary destination, a fun gathering place for locals and a memorable space for events.

The House at Gatewood – which was once an estate house – is nestled within 16 acres of beautiful landscape and features three dining rooms where large parties can be accommodated easily without interfering with regular restaurant service. A full bar and an outdoor patio, which hosts live music most weekends, invites guests to relax and stay.

Owner and Executive Chef Ron Spada relocated his family to Hillsborough, North Carolina to create this unique dining and event destination. His innovative handcrafted food is a twist on barbecue, southern dishes, beverages – an experience infused by warm Southern hospitality where old meets new.

The Spada family completely renovated the historic estate, thoughtfully preserving its nostalgic character and natural property features.

Y'ate Yet? Leave the cooking to us, we invite you to meet, greet and eat at The House at Gatewood.

ESTATE HISTORY

The Gatewood Estate property located on Highway 70 in Hillsborough, NC is approximately 16 acres, includes three houses, a large pond and beautiful landscaping features. Unknown to many, the property was originally built and occupied by the W.V. Fryer family in the 1940's. They lived there until they moved to Florida in the 1950's after white oak timber resources for their family mill were depleted.

The property had a few other owners over the years before Dr. Joseph Gatewood, a local dentist purchased the estate and lived there for over 30 years. His name and many great stories about him and his dedication to the Hillsborough community have been associated with the property ever since.

OLD MEETS NEW

The main estate house has been completely renovated - while still preserving its nostalgic character and natural property features. The garage has been replaced with an approximately 2,000 square foot addition to provide plenty of kitchen space and a wall has been opened to expand the visual footprint. The restaurant features three dining rooms, a large bar, enclosed and outdoor patios as well as two private rooms to host larger parties and events.

The new House at Gatewood serves as both a culinary destination and a fun gathering place for locals. The restaurant features innovative handcrafted food, beverages and an experience all infused by a warm Southern hospitality where old meets new.

CHEF RON SPADA

Owner and Executive Chef Ron Spada delights the Hillsborough community with his twist on barbecue and southern dishes. He moved his family to Hillsborough, North Carolina, when he discovered the area and saw a unique opportunity to create a memorable dining destination.

He began cooking when he was 14 years old and went on to graduate near the top of his class from Johnson & Wales with a degree in Culinary Arts. Chef Ron pursued his passion for cooking in New York City across fine dining and large event production. Before moving to NC with his family, Ron owned a restaurant and catering business in Stockton, NJ. The catering business grew into a restaurant when he was catering for performers of a music festival when people kept asking where they could purchase it. This spurred Chef Ron to open More Than Q, a barbecue-style restaurant in New Jersey.

Chef Ron handcrafts his food from the inside out. The menu varies with the seasons so he can create dishes around fresh ingredients that he sources from local and regional farmers. Curated cocktails and a carefully selected wine and beer menu completes the dining experience.

He was featured on "Eat This" with Chuck Thomas, was voted one of the best BBQs by New Jersey Monthly Magazine and named a finalist for Best New Restaurant in Orange/Chatham County in Indy Week Magazine.
